

in those early days for it's hospitality, and cowboys would drive for many miles to partake of the wonderful cooking of Mrs. Henke. Everyone was made welcome, and no one was ever charged for meals received.

After her second marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Henke and the boys continued to reside at the home ranch until 1916, at which time a home was built in Wheatland, and since then the Henkes have made their home here.

Raymond A. Henke is also a true pioneer, coming to Cheyenne in 1874. He is the sole survivor of 14 men who took part in an Indian fight at Horse Creek in 1875, when the Indians raided and stole horses belonging to the ranchers and the government.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon for Mrs. Henke from the Lyla Watson Funeral Home, with Rev. R.E. Morgan in charge. The pallbearers were Ned Dover, Walter Berner, Gus Rosentreter, Geo. Martin, Alex Hales, and Mark Marten, all old neighbors of Mrs. Henke. The body was laid in its final resting place in the Wheatland cemetery. Many beautiful floral gifts were sent showing how well-loved this pioneer woman was in the community in which she had spent so many years of her life.

Among out-of-town relatives and friends who attended the funeral were Mrs. Pauline Edwards, niece of Mr. Henke, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Henke and Mrs. Rose Henke, all of Cheyenne.

Mr. Henke returned to Saratoga with Mr. and Mrs. Plaga and will make an indefinite visit at that place.
